

Studying changes in my behavior through 10 years of FB activity data

Louis-Charles Généreux

Facebook has been around my life for 10 years, studying my activity has illustrated my behavioral change

Since integratating the workforce, the growth of my social graph-has stagnated. My Facebook friend growth has halted and my instagram social-graph growth is now driven by non-reciprocal follows of interest-based pages

Since integrating the workforce, my messaging activity has slowed and shifted from Facebook to instagam. My social-circle has shrunk and discussions now revolve around common passions with close friends

Since integrating the workforce, my online behavior has shifted from “active posting”, to “passive observing”, from facebook to instagram. This is evident through my abrupt drop in FB posts and growth in instagram liking
